

Michael Gibbs
Clinical Professor of Economics & Human Resources
University of Chicago Booth School of Business
5807 S. Woodlawn Avenue, Chicago, IL 60637
773.834.4351 | 773.753.0809 fax
Michael.Gibbs@ChicagoBooth.edu

September 9, 2009

Kathy Graham
Via email

Dear Kathy,

I just read The Land of Lemons and Nuts. What a great book! Thank you for telling me about it.

You have done a wonderful job creating a children's tale that gently and effectively illustrates fundamental ideas about economics: gains from trade, benefits of working to produce a good to sell, and international trade.

I like that you ended the book with a traditional saying, but with an economics component added. That serves to make the lesson more memorable.

The pictures are charming and the printing quite attractive. I recommended it to my economics students for their children.

I have always felt that simple economic principles should be taught to children. It is an important part of one's understanding of life and society. This is a good step in that direction.

I suspect that you can come up with additional tales to turn this into a series illustrating other economic principles. If so, please let me know.

Sincerely,

